The Duke's choice

TATHEN King Edward VIII decided in 1937 that a love affair was more important than his Empire. British dealt the monarchy a staggering For he was no insignificant, unknown princeling suddenly translated by a remote relation's death to the supremacy of the English throne. He was the apple of the public's eye and as one observer commented recently: "All the emotional devotion not only in the British Empire, but throughout the world was concentrated on him ... no young man has ever been so much beloved by people so vastly different."

And the man of whom so much was expected and in whom so much admiration. pride and hope was vested. turned from the path of duty for a life of pleasure, carefree case and gniety. We might add that the path of duty he faced as king was one which had keen trodden smooth by more than a thousand years of custom, tradition and refinement and his burdens therefore were not exceptionally onerous.

NDEED with the affection he enjoyed and a constitutional responsibility lighter than any English king in history had been asked to bear, he had everything in his favour. A propitious and glorious reign lay before him. Let it be clearly understood that England did not repudiate her king. It was the King who walked out on Emgland.

Almost 25 years have passed. The monarchy not only survived the abdication but under the much beloved King George VI and the present Queen and her widely respected consort, made a brilliant recovery. And today in its new Commonwealth setting, it enjoys a stability and popularity rarely equalled in history. Britain and the Commonwealth can be thankful that there were such people to save the throne. And if the Duke of Windsor has felt, as his wife the Duchess now says, that since his departure he has been treated rather shabbily by the of scurities in Miami. British Government and is a pathetic, aimless and has been missing since last June somewhat forlorn charac- after amounting it was moving ter, the fault is not to Panama. Britain's. It is his own.

is doubtful if many British people actively hold a grudge today. Many indeed felt sympathy for him in his abdication dilemma. Some blamed prudish conventions, politicians and the Church and, in spite of disappointment, wished him good fortune and happiness. But he had no claim on Britain to provide him with employment, titles, land, pension or prestige. Yet in spite of this he has been able to lead a dignified, prosperous and comfortable existence.

If the Duchess of Windsor has anything to more about | it can only be that her husband has not made use of his talents or tried seriously to rise above the l life into which he has so effortlessly and easily drifted. Real or imagined cold shoulders from Buckingham Palace Have not condemned him to this existence. For unlike other members of that frustrated set of unemployed royalty who were spurned by their people, the Duke still arouses incredulity as the King who rejected his people and his throne,

Second coup in six months

Washington, Jan. 25. The second coup within six months has toppled the government of the mountainous Central American coffee republic of El Salvador, diplomatic sources here said today.

They said they had no details of the reported takeover of power from a civilian and military junta which ousted anti-Communist President Jose Maria Lemus last October and promised to restore civil libertles while remaining pro-Western.

The reports followed failure of efforts to contact El Salvador by radio or telegraph since yesterday, though an El Salvador Embassy spokesman here said such conditions were not anknown and did not necessarily mean the interruption of communications to be political.

DEVICE AIRCRAFT

London, Jan. 25. An airline engineer flew from London to New Delhi today to put a safety device in the Britannia aircraft carrying the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh on their Asian tour.

Boac acted after a Britannia had trouble lowering its nose wheel on landing in London on Monday. A "minor mechanical modification" was devised and ordered installed on all Britannias.

"It was felt desirable to send an engineer to India," Boac said, "as the royal aircraft will not be returning to London for several weeks."-AP.

THE CHURCHES MEET

London, Jan. 25.

CLERGY from five An-U glican churches, nonconformist ministers, and members of their congregations attended solemn High Mass at a Roman Catholic church recently.

A spokesman for the Church Times said: "There has never been a service like this before in England."

Crowds soon came to watch these alarming French prophets. As a spectacle it made a nice change from an afternoon watching hangings at Tyburn.

But among the gapers there were many who found themselves oddly moved and impressed. Somehow the thing caught on. Soon London was full of home-born prophets busily twitching and foretelling the Millennium and the downfall of all established religion. Symonda selects some splendld figures from the movement. # ITALY SAYS THINK PINK,

Jane Rogers

WANT something witty and gay to wear around the house? Thinking of buying some new outfits for the beach or the barbecue? Then Italy is the place to find them.

But you don't need to take an airline ticket to Rome, the store buyers have done that for you. And before long all that is brightest and gayest in the Italian couture collections will be seen in your own shop windows.

Never before have so many stores sent their buyers to Italy for ideas—there were nearly 60 from Britain alone-and here are some of the things they are snapping to:

They're buying beach clothe: in dazzling rabblew stripes, oranges yellows and mauves off mixed together on a plain while ground. This is sparking off a new trend for clothes in multicolour-striped materials.

Agostini: Undercover payments for athletes are widely accepted

New York, Jan. 25. Mike Agostini, one of the world's to p sprinters in the 1950's, charges that undercover payments to amateur track and field athletes are widely accepted and that even some am ateur officials are involved.

says that some amateur rumers make as much as $10,000 a year in Europe, with Scandinavia the choicest payoff area. Agostini, a Trinidadian now living in London, declares in a copyrighted story eppearing in Sports Illustrated magazine that amoteur track and field should be called "shama-

Prices vary

Prices for running at indoor meetings, he writes, vary with the athlete's events. Sprinters, plentiful in the U.S., may get from $50 to $150. Middle-distance men command a higher fee, ranging from $100 to $600. The milers are the best paid of all. Some can command fees of $1,000 and the average miler acts

As the bell clangs for the twelfth round, the champion comes stalking from his corner like a tiger about to pounce on his prey. Crouching, swaying, with the roar of the crowd hammering in his ears, the little man waits implacably for the opening.

Then, with a quick shift, this sawn-off Hercules with the slicked-down hair and fixed, bird-like stare, smashes a slaughering left hook flush to the jaw. And there, crumpled on the canvas, lies the challenger with 40,000 halfcrazed fans up on their feet shouting and screaming.

That was Benny Lynch at Shawfield Park, Glasgow, on the cold, squally night of October 13, 1937—the night of his greatest fight. Punching with crushing speed and power, he annihilated Peter Kane, the 19-year-old blacksmith from Golborne, Lancashire, in their head-on clash for the world flyweight title.

Right from the beginning, the fight had been one of high excitement. For more than on hour before Lynch and Kine entered the ring, a mob of people milled and clamoured for admission around the narrow entrances of the ground. Police were defied, women jostled and injured in the rush and eruch to get in.

Like a gigantic Rubgy serum the crowd surged forward Hundreds clambered over fence and leaped barriers. Other: crawled beneath stands in the slush and mud to reach ringside seats.
